Recent experience in research and evaluation

John's research and evaluation interests stem from a body of work over a number of years that has progressed from adult learning, social capital and community well-being to a more focused interest in complex issues relating to families and children (including family violence and child protection). In the last six years, he has more intentionally researched these issues in the context of remote Indigenous communities in the Northern Territory. Recently completed evaluation projects include a three year evaluation of Communities for Children projects in East Arnhem (for Anglicare-Northern Territory) and Palmerston/Tiwi Islands (for Red Cross), a two year evaluation of Family Violence Partnership Program (FVPP) projects across the Northern Territory, an evaluation of a Differential Response Framework trial (relating to child protection services for DHF) and a community-led traditional healing centre, based in Alice Springs. His interest in adult learning continues from a research and evaluation perspective, as well as from a teaching and learning perspective.

John has a particular interest in developing data collection systems and tools. He uses a variety of research and evaluation approaches to fit the context. These include use of program logic, participatory and action learning evaluation methods, and mixed methods, utilisation focused approaches. He is adept at analysing both qualitative and quantitative data.

As a consultant he partners collaboratively with research and industry organisations nationally. His business operates from bases in Tasmania and the Northern Territory.

2002 - present Charles Darwin University, Darwin: Research and evaluation consultant

Assisting with data analysis and reporting: Projects include: Evaluation of the Northern Territory Differential Response Framework (2008-2009); Evaluation of Family Violence Partnership Program projects (2006-2008); Evaluation of the Akeyulerre Healing Centre (2009-2010); NCVET Role of VET in Welfare to work (2006-2007); NCVET VET/ACE Connections in Northern Australia (2005-2007). He has acted as a local evaluator for CDU evaluations of Communities for Children projects in East Arnhem and Palmerston/Tiwi and an Invest to Grow evaluation based in central Australia (2005-2009).

1997 - present Cat Conatus, Ulverstone: Research and evaluation consultancy

Contracting to educational institutions, businesses and government agencies across Tasmania and nationally with an extensive range of evaluation and consultancy services. Consultancy projects include: Evaluation of Department of Education Flexible Provision Program, North West Tasmania (2009); Development of evaluation tools for FAST in remote Northern Territory communities (2008-2009); Centacare (NW Tas) Survey of clients and organisations (2008); Evaluation of the Desert Peoples Centre's TrainingPlus program (2009-2010); and Evaluation of Centacare's (NW Tasmania) Weathering Family Separation Program (2010-2012).

1998 - present University of Tasmania, Launceston: Research Consultant/Associate/Lecturer

Assisting in a range of research related activities from research design to literature review and data analysis. John has an ongoing relationship with the University Department of Rural Health and continues to work with the team there as required, developing proposals and conducting focused research and analysis. Recent projects include: Evaluation of 'Safe from the Start' (2008). He has acted as a local evaluator for UDRH evaluations of Communities for Children projects in Burnie and South East Tasmania. He is also currently engaged as an adult learning practitioner at the Cradle Coast Campus in Burnie.
